ANYDAY IN THE NAVY

Throughout the year, All Hands tries to showcase the many ways that Sailors around the globe contribute to the well-being of their nation and the stability of whatever theater they are in. You'll find Sailors just about anywhere, supporting maritime security, fostering international cooperation, providing humanitarian assistance, contributing boots on the ground and participating in a huge range of missions both traditional and novel. You'll find evidence of that right here in our annual “Any Day in the Navy” issue, which is intended to highlight the Navy as seen by Navy photographers and others around the world. We here on the staff of All Hands can't be everywhere at once, but they are.

It's a challenge to take more than 12,000 photos from an entire year and distill them down into a compelling and fair representation of the Navy, but that is what we strive for. We hope that you find in this issue a glimpse of what Sailors bring to the fight every day, all around the world.

ON THE FRONT COVER

U.S. Navy search and rescue (SAR) swimmer, AW1 Tim Hawkins assigned to Helicopter Squadron (Light) (HSL) 40, Mayport, Fla., retrieves and evacuates a victim of Hurricane Katrina from a rooftop in New Orleans to an SH-60B Seahawk helicopter. The Navy's involvement in the Hurricane Katrina humanitarian assistance operations was led by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), in conjunction with DOD.
